

Want a Lifetime Email Address?

Save That Address for Family and Friends; Use ManyMe for Everything Else

BOSTON, MA – Wouldn't it be nice to have a life-long email address with a clean inbox? While data breaches and abusive senders make this a difficult goal to achieve, help has arrived from ManyMe.com. ManyMe is a free service that makes it easy to take control over the impersonal, commercial email that can quickly overwhelm an email inbox and render an address unusable.

With ManyMe, you can reserve your primary email address for family, friends and trusted colleagues, and use substitute ManyMe email addresses for everyone else, whether on-line, in conversation or when filling out paper forms. Importantly, ManyMe remembers and manages each substitute address, so you needn't remember a thing. This approach protects your privacy while providing exceptional control over senders who view you as a target for advertising and data collection.

By automating the management of multiple email identities, ManyMe eliminates the need for multiple email accounts and disposable email addresses. All email sent to a ManyMe address undergoes rigorous security filtering before being forwarded to your primary inbox, in any email system, so you have only one inbox to manage.

With ManyMe's simple delivery options, you now have control over abusive senders. For example, ManyMe reveals when an address spreads to new senders, and gives you the tools to defeat the consequences. A "lockdown" option permits the delivery of email solely from authorized senders, and an "instant unsubscribe" option makes it is easy to disable an address completely.

By making it simple to use multiple email identities, ManyMe also provides important security advantages, reducing your exposure to credential reuse attacks and helping identify phishing attacks. Additional security screening and best practices are implemented automatically in the background.

"ManyMe provides a simple yet powerful way to protect the long-term integrity of your personal email address," said David Hughes, ManyMe's cofounder. "ManyMe provides the only other email address you'll ever need."
